

Funeral Benefit | Fact Sheet

A funeral benefit provides financial assistance to the family of the deceased, ensuring that the deceased receives a dignified burial.

The funeral benefit may be offered as a member-only benefit or as a family benefit. The family benefit allows for cover to include an insured's spouse and children with the option of also including parents, depending on the policyholder's benefit selection.

The benefit can be compulsory or voluntary and is an unapproved benefit.

The basic benefit

The benefit is a flat benefit amount, selected by the policyholder at the start of the policy. If the policyholder has selected the family benefit, the benefits are scaled. The policyholder can request a scale appropriate for the scheme.

The benefit for the main member is paid as a lump sum to the insured's nominated beneficiary or estate in the case of no nominated beneficiary.

The benefit for other insureds under the policy is paid as a lump sum to the main member.

Ancillary benefits

The policyholder can choose to provide additional cover by including any of the following ancillary benefits:

- Continuing cover if disabled benefit

If disability income benefits are offered as part of the employee benefit programme, this benefit allows disability claimants to remain covered for funeral benefits whilst in receipt of disability income benefits.

- Paid-up benefit

The paid-up benefit allows cover to continue for all insureds who are covered for benefits, on the date that the main member is disabled or dies.

Premiums will be waived from the date of the main member's death or disability.

- Body repatriation service

This benefit allows for the repatriation of mortal human remains for distances of 150km or more from destination. The service covers South Africa and neighbouring states such as Lesotho, Swaziland, Botswana, Mozambique, Zimbabwe and Namibia.

Additional services such as advice on the processing of all necessary and associated documentation and assistance in dealing with Government appointed Funeral Directors in reclaiming mortal remains are provided if required.

The amount payable is determined by various factors including the distance travelled and method of transport and is limited to the maximums outlined below.

Benefit maximums

- All benefits are subject to a maximum Rand amount, for each insured as outlined below.
- The benefit for the spouse, child or parent may not be more than the main member's benefit.
- Aggregation does not apply.
- The maximum covered cost of repatriation is R15 000 if within South African borders, or R25 000 if in neighbouring states.
